Books will be impartially reviewed at length, if deserving particular attention, and those desiring a record of the do-ings of the literary world would do well to examine this department. Casting aside the old plan of depending solely on names for success, the Publisher of Holden's Magazine has adopted the system of the Spectator of Johnson's and Addison's time, and Blackwood and our own Quarterlies of the present day; and though confessing himself in-debted to some of our first authors for their contributions to each number, he has given every article to the world anonymously. The Spectator owed much of its success to the mystery in which its essays were shrouded, and could the world but know whence emanated some of the scorching articles furnished us by Blackwood within the few months, New York would probably be the scene of another Literary War. The proprietor is confiden; that this plan must eventually be the plan for Periodical Literature, and he only asks rom the lovers of Good Reading an inspection of his Magazine. THE day will come when this medicine will be propounced capable of doing more good, than any five medicines before the public. At present, it is but partially known; the half has never been told. But when it shall be tested in all the various departments of sickness and disease; when its wonderful virtues shall be developed; its powers over the maladies of men seen and felt, then it will be acknowledged that 'Alister's All Healing Ointment has power to cure more diseases than any five medicines before the world. This will appear plain upon a moments reflection. There are two prominent reasons for this assertion:

1st. That by opening the pores of the skin, it removes all hindrances to the full and free charge of the insensible perspiration, and thus removes the grand cause of nine-tenths of the diseases in the contract of the charge of the skin, it is therefore a same charge of the grand cause of nine-tenths of the diseases in this world, and it is therefore as applicable to one-disease as another, to the Liver Complaint, Con-sumption and Dyspepsia, as the Sick Headache and Ague in the Face, or to the Asthma, Coughs, Fevers and Bowel Complaints, as the Quincy, Sore Throat, Bronchitis and Croup, for they are all caused by checking the Insensible Perspiration, in other words, in "taking cold."

2d. That for almost every disease, there is a specific remedy; and although there are a legion of them recommended for the cure of the same particular diseases, yet how seldom is it that one ranted it in the public esteem.

The Union Magazine will be published regulary on the first of each month.

He seeks a variety of inward remedies, but in no one does he find relief, unless it is capable of forcing off perspiration, which is but a momentary relief, as the peres again close the moment the effect of the medicine has ceased.

It may be said with truth, that all inward remedies fail of curior there complaints aix if not sight.

dies fail of curing these complaints six if not eight times in ten, the world over; and yet a medicine that will not cure at least half the cases it is applied to, we call a poor remedy.

Now what is the cause of the above complaints? We answer, checked perspiration, in other words, "catching cold." The skin then, and not the internal organs, is out of order. And we assert that unless the skin is brought into healthy activity, and made to eliminate the Insensible Perspiration freely and fully, not all the medicines in the world will save the consumptive from the grave. will save the consumptive from the grave. To make our words, true, let us quote from a celebrated southern doctor, who wrote a labored treatise on Pulmonary Consumption. He says:—"But let us return to the consideration of the indications of a cure; it is simply this: the restoration of the In-sensible Perspiration. In other words, to excite a natural healthy action of the skin. This is all that is required for the cure of 999 cases out of every Fevers, also, and nearly every case of inflamation of the bowels, or of the stomach or lungs, is the direct result of checked perspiration. Besides these, we may name diseases of the spine and of the nerves, rheumatism, fever sores; diseases of the chest, such as asthma, tightness of breath, pains, weakness, dispepsin; also constipation of the bowweakness, dispepsia; also constitution of the bow-els, croop, cutaneous eruptions, and all diseases oi the skin; in short, nine-tenths of the diseases in our country, are produced by this one thing— checked perspiration. If it is not serious at first, it finally settles upon some vital organ, when it is almost certain to result in death, unless it is removed.

The only advantage the All Wealing Omment has over other remedies, lies in the one thing-the restoration of the Insensible Prespirations. contracted with one of our most popular Novel- When this is done, the humors and impurities nev-
